

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus is disclosed that establishes a disaster recovery plan to recover from the occurrence of a predetermined event. The plan enables the transfer of communications for at least one phone number from one switch to another switch by 5 changing the local number portability database and programming the second switch to terminate the phone numbers from the first switch.